Foundation Accepts Blue Mounds Easement Restoration of 77 acres Permanently Protected

by Marcus Renner

This December Julie Hayward and Donn D’Alessio donated a conservation easement to DCNHF on their property of 77 acres in the Blue Mounds Township. The land is in a unique area of Dane County, untouched by glaciers with topography shaped by the work of rivers and streams. The property contains two of these streams, tributaries of German Valley Creek, and a high ridge with several distinctive sandstone and limestone outcroppings. The diverse topography once encouraged a range of ecological communities, including oak savanna, wetland, and several types of prairie. Brian Bader, a local ecologist, has now developed a plan for Julie and Donn to restore these areas to their natural state.

Before being purchased by Julie and Donn in 1994, the property had been surveyed as two separate parcels, one with a proposed hilltop home site and a driveway through a sensitive wetland area. Intermittent farming, and most recently its use as a goat dairy farm, had left most of the land undeveloped but had degraded certain areas. Immediately recognizing the value of the property as a natural site, Julie and Donn began restoring sections of native oak savanna and woodland. This past spring their first annual burn was conducted by Prairie Enthusiasts volunteers to encourage the regrowth of native vegetation. In the months since, as part of their restoration activities, Donn has spent countless hours removing exotic species from the understory.

The easement given to DCNHF emerged from Julie and Donn’s long-time attachment to the natural landscape, which was nourished for Julie as a volunteer with the UW-Arboretum and The Nature Conservancy. The easement will help preserve Julie and Donn’s restoration efforts for generations to come. It will prevent subdivision of the land, which is rapidly engulfing neighboring areas, and will ensure habitat for many species of wildlife, which are already returning to this valley refuge.

Token Creek
The Life and Times of the Early Settlers - Part 3

This is an excerpt from a manuscript written by Bernadine Smith and Bud Graff about the history of the Token Creek area.

The women of the community were capable, hard working wives and mothers. Household chores cycled with the seasons. When the garden produce was harvested it was canned in glass jars. When the cows or pigs were butchered it was time to can meat. There were no home freezers. In the 1950's a frozen food locker could be rented in Sun Prairie at the "Locker Plant".

It would have been unheard of, for these women to go to town for fun when it was time for work canning, washing and ironing, cooking, cleaning, and caring for the needs of the husband and children. It was this generation of women who faced tremendous changes in lifestyles.

The men of this time were also hard working, family men. In the spring the crops were planted. Summer time brought the tasks of cultivating crops and putting up hay. In the fall, the farmers shared equipment and helped each other fill their silos with corn silage.

Most farmers also had Holstein cows. Milking was done by hand and later with the help of automatic milking machines. Farm wives scrubbed the dairy equipment daily in case the milk inspector appeared. Infractions could cause milk from that farm to be refused. Some farmers carried their own milk cans to the cheese factory which had been built in the Token Creek area in 1911. It was located at the intersection of Portage Road and Rattman Road and operated until November 17, 1956.

1995 Stewardship Awards

Living the Land Ethic

The 1995 Stewardship Awards program held November 2, was a wonderful evening celebrating the lives and the work of several people who embody the spirit of Aldo Leopold's Land Ethic.

We heard the words of Aldo Leopold, read by his daughter, and also the words of August Derleth and George Vukelich. Their writing reflected on the season and the beauty of Wisconsin, their writing challenged us to contemplate the natural world, and our role as caretakers.

This year's awardees truly reflected this sense of caring for the land. We heard from Mark and Sue Martin who have dedicated their lives to restoring native prairie and sharing this with youth. We were inspired Emily Earley, who works locally and worldwide to create nature preserve. Ken LePine, Director of the Dane County Parks Department, noted the partnerships with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, the County, and the City of Middleton, that made the purchase for the Friedrich property possible. Mayor Dan Ramsey of Middleton shared his vision for the parks and openspace for Middleton. Finally, we were charmed by young Girl Scouts who received an award for their wildflower seed collecting for our county parks.

Papa Hambone Tribute

At the Stewardship Awards event, we were joined by the family and friends of George Vukelich to pay tribute to his life and works on behalf of Mother Nature. George was an outspoken advocate for the environment through his two volumes of North Country Notebook, and his radio program on Wisconsin Public Radio, and weekly column in the Isthmus. He instilled in many people a great love for Wisconsin's lakes, rivers, forests and wildlife.

Though his voice is stilled, his words continue to echo from the hills and valleys of Wisconsin:

"Did you know this north country in the piney-winey summer days before chainsaws, when you could get intoxicated on the smell of hemlock in the sun-warmed air?

Did you know this north country in the winter before snowmobiles, when the only tracks in the snow were made by the Four-Footed Ones looking for food and the Two-Footed Ones looking for the outhouse?

Did you know this north country before there were all-terrain vehicles and dune buggies? Before jet planes in the sky and jet skis in the water? Before gasoline-powered cars, trucks, motor homes, motorcycles, motor scooters and motorized ice augers?

Did you know this north country, this Old Wisconsin, without noise? Did you know it when it was as silent as a church, and the only sound for miles around came from little chickadees swinging on the pine branches like tiny tinkling bells?

If you did, you are blessed."

George Vukelich (1927-1995)

Volunteers Needed!

Volunteering for DCNHF is a great way to learn more about land conservation in Dane County. We are looking for a person to help us organize our collection of photographs, put together a scrapbook, create displays about the Foundation and its projects and help create a brochure. The schedule is flexible according to your needs. If you are interested in all or a portion of these tasks, please call Ruth at 258-9797.

Jeff Nania of the Wisconsin Waterfowl Association and Marcus Renner of DCNHF survey Six Mile Creek on the Wilke Preserve.

The Wilke Preserve, one mile north of Waunakee, contains a large basin with several springs and an un-named tributary of Six-Mile Creek which the Foundation hopes to restore as a wetland. The restoration is a joint project with the Wisconsin Waterfowl Association. When restored, this wetland area will provide a feeding and resting area for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife.

A few of our neighbors have asked good questions concerning the project and its impact on their property. To get some answers, we are carrying out additional surveying of the creek basin and requesting a drainage analysis through the University Extension Service drainage experts. The results will be shared with everyone and will help us all better understand the drainage in this area. Anyone with questions can call Ruth at the DCNHF office 258-9797.
